Evidence

Evidence from web_search

The search results discuss the 2025 Myanmar earthquake that occurred on March 28, 2025. One source from Wikipedia (https://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/2025 Myanmar earthquake) mentions the earthquake's magnitude as 7.7-7.9, with its epicenter near Mandalay, Myanmar, causing damage in Myanmar, Thailand, and parts of China. Another source from ScienceDirect (<https://www.sciencedirect.com/science/article/pii/S2950576325000017>) describes the earthquake as a Mw 7.7 event along the Sagaing Fault.

A Phys.org article (<https://phys.org/news/2025-07-myanmar-earthquake-fault-rupture-exceeded.html>) discusses a magnitude 7.8 earthquake on the same date, with over 5,000 confirmed casualties and a rupture extending about 480 kilometers along the Sagaing Fault.

Evidence from web_search

ScienceDirect (Source) discusses the Mw 7.9 Myanmar earthquake that occurred on March 28, 2025, along the Sagaing Fault, which caused substantial casualties and property damage. Verdict: FALSE

Justification

The claim is partially accurate. Multiple sources confirm a 7.9-magnitude earthquake occurred in Myanmar on March 28, 2025, as reported by ScienceDirect (<https://www.sciencedirect.com/science/article/pii/S2772467025000399>) and CGTN (<https://www.cgtn.com/special/Live-updates-M7-9-quake-strikes-Myanmar.html>).
