Evidence

Evidence from `web_search`

On February 12, 2025, Donald Trump and Vladimir Putin had a phone call, and Trump shared details of the conversation and agreed to begin peace talks, according to Wikipedia. The White House stated that Trump and Putin agreed to start talks toward a ceasefire in Ukraine, beginning with a 30-day halt to strikes on energy infrastructure, as reported by NPR

Reuters reported that Trump said both Putin and Zelenskyy expressed a desire for peace in separate phone calls with him, and Trump ordered top U.S. officials to begin talks on ending the war in Ukraine, as stated in Reuters

. Trump and Putin discussed "getting a ceasefire in the not-too-distant future."

Elaboration

The evidence indicates that after the call on February 12, 2025, Trump announced the beginning of peace talks and ordered top U.S. officials to start talks on ending the war in Ukraine. The White House stated that Trump and Putin agreed to start talks toward a ceasefire.

The evidence does not explicitly state that Trump announced he had reached an agreement to end the war. Instead, it suggests that talks were initiated with the goal of achieving a ceasefire.

Final Judgement

The claim is partially accurate. While the call did occur and talks were initiated, the evidence does not support the claim that an agreement to end the war was reached.

misleading

Verdict: MISLEADING

Justification

Following a call with Vladimir Putin on February 12, 2025, Donald Trump announced the initiation of peace talks and ordered U.S. officials to begin talks on ending the war in Ukraine, as reported by Reuters and NPR. However, the evidence does not support the claim that Trump announced he had reached an agreement to end the war.
