

Claim

Claim: "

This image shows a palestinian child stuck under the rubble in Gaza after an Israeli airstrike in July 2024."

Actions

`reverse_search(![image 59] (media/92.jpg))`

Evidence

Evidence from reverse_search

The image shows a Syrian child named Sham who was rescued from the rubble in Armanaz, Idlib countryside, Syria, after an earthquake on February 6 or 7, 2023. The child was later transferred to Abu Dhabi's Burjeel Hospital. The image was used by Asma al-Assad, the wife of Syrian President Bashar al-Assad, to try to whitewash their image.

The image appears in articles from Enab Baladi (<https://english.enabbaladi.net/archives/2023/03/shams-journey-from-under-the-rubble-to-abu-dhabis-burjeel-hospital/>), UAE Times (<https://uaetimes.ae/shams-journey-from-under-the-rubble-to-abu-dhabis-burjeel-hospital/>), and El País (<https://english.elpais.com/international/2023-07-20/the-manual-of-repression-shared-by-modern-tyrants.html>).

Elaboration

The image depicts a Syrian child named Sham rescued from the rubble in Armanaz, Idlib, Syria, after an earthquake in February 2023. The claim that the image shows a Palestinian child in Gaza after an Israeli airstrike in July 2024 is false.

Final Judgement

The image shows a Syrian child rescued from the rubble in Syria after an earthquake in February 2023, not a Palestinian child in Gaza after an Israeli airstrike in July 2024. The claim misrepresents the origin, content, and meaning of the image.

misleading

Verdict: MISLEADING

Justification

The image depicts a Syrian child rescued from the rubble in Syria after an earthquake in February 2023, not a Palestinian child in Gaza after an Israeli airstrike in July 2024. The image was used by Asma al-Assad to try to whitewash their image. The image appears in articles from Enab Baladi, UAE Times, and El País.