Evidence

Evidence from reverse_search

The image (

) shows a fire at an oil refinery near Tehran. The Times of Israel (https://www.timesofisrael.com/liveblog_entry/huge-fire-at-refinery-near-tehran-extinguished-after-20-hours-report/), The Globe and Mail (<https://www.theglobeandmail.com/world/article-massive-fire-breaks-out-at-oil-refinery-south-of-tehran/>), and The New Arab (<https://www.newarab.com/news/massive-fire-breaks-out-oil-refinery-near-irans-capital>) all published articles on June 2, 2021, about the fire. The fire was caused by a liquefied gas line leak and explosion.

Evidence from web_search

Multiple news sources, including CNN (<https://www.cnn.com/world/live-news/israel-iran-strikes-lebanon-gaza-war-10-26-24>), NPR (<https://www.npr.org/2024/10/25/nx-s1-5165574/israel-iran-airstrikes-tehran>), and The Guardian (<https://www.theguardian.com/world/2024/oct/26/idf-israel-iran-strikes-explosions-tehran>), reported on Israeli airstrikes against military targets in Iran on October 26, 2024, in retaliation for attacks against Israel.

The articles mention explosions in Tehran and nearby Karaj, with the IDF stating the attacks were a response to previous attacks. The CNN article also mentions that four Iranian military members died in the attack.

Elaboration

The claim is partially accurate. The image shows a fire near Tehran, but it is not from October 26, 2024. The image is from a fire at an oil refinery near Tehran on June 2, 2021. However, the web search confirms that there were Israeli airstrikes in Tehran on October 26, 2024.

Final Judgement

The image is from a fire in 2021, not from the alleged bombing in 2024. While there were indeed Israeli airstrikes in Tehran on October 26, 2024, the image is not related to those events.
