Evidence from `image_search`

A Reuters article from February 1, 2025, discusses the US's desire for Ukraine to hold elections following a ceasefire. [

] The search results also include images of Donald Trump. [

The provided sources do not mention a call between Donald Trump and Vladimir Putin on February 12, 2025, or an agreement to end the war in Ukraine.

Elaboration

The evidence suggests that Donald Trump was involved in discussions related to the Ukraine war. An article from February 13, 2025, indicates that Trump stated Putin wanted peace and would begin talks. However, there is no mention of an agreement to end the war.

The search results include images of Trump with Putin and Zelenskyy, suggesting direct involvement with both leaders. However, the evidence does not confirm that Trump announced an agreement to end the war after a call with Putin on February 12, 2025.

The claim cannot be verified based on the provided evidence. The evidence does not mention the specific call on February 12, 2025, or an agreement to end the war.

Final Judgement

The evidence indicates that Donald Trump was involved in discussions related to the Ukraine war, but there is no mention of a call between Trump and Putin on February 12, 2025, or an agreement to end the war.

The claim is not supported by the evidence. The provided sources do not mention the specific call on February 12, 2025, or an agreement to end the war.

Verdict: FALSE

Justification

Based on the evidence, while Donald Trump was involved in discussions related to the Ukraine war, there is no mention of a call between Trump and Putin on February 12, 2025, or an agreement to end the war. An article from Al Jazeera on February 13, 2025, mentions Trump stating Putin wants peace and will begin talks, but no agreement was announced.
