Evidence

Evidence from web_search

JetBlue Airways was criticized for displaying "Palestinian Territories" on its in-flight map, covering the area of Israel. The incident, which occurred in September 2024, sparked outrage and was reported by The Jerusalem Post (<https://www.jpost.com/diaspora/article-818656>) and Baltimore Jewish Life (https://baltimorejewishlife.com/news/news-detail.php?SECTION_ID=1&ARTICLE_ID=174672).

The map also did not include the Golan Heights within Israel's borders. Live and Let's Fly (<https://liveandletsfly.com/jetblue-palestinian-territories-map/>) also reported on the controversy. JetBlue subsequently fired its map vendor, GeoFusion.
